Gardening club news

February 2018

It's fortunate that the snowdrops are braving this cold weather, giving us some hope that spring will eventually arrive. However, having looked at a long range weather report for the rest of this month and next month, it looks as if we are going to have a longer wait than usual: something to do with dramatic disturbances in the stratosphere which are going to bring high easterly winds rather than westerlies. On a more upbeat note, the July visit to Gresgarth has been confirmed. In the meantime, enjoy the snowdrops!
